

Union Hill Presbyterian Church travels to Floyd County, Kentucky 2023

Reflection from Sean Clarkson:

This year Union Hill Presbyterian Church of Denville coupled with Denville Community Church and traveled to Floyd County, Kentucky to work with the Appalachia Service Project.

I had the privilege of being a Team Leader for the first time as my team removed and replaced a set of stairs for a lovely woman and her seven dogs. Their home had been damaged by recent flooding. In all of my years going on ASP, the homeowners have been nothing but loving, helpful and supportive. It's a truly special experience to be welcomed into their homes and lives in order to help make their homes warmer, safer and drier. The ASP mission trips are amazing weeks, full of work, fun, and faith.

We were surprised when we arrived at the Floyd County ASP Center to be welcomed by Ava Rodgers, who is from the Lower Valley Presbyterian Church in the Highlands Presbytery, and was a summer ASP staff member this year. Shout out to Ava and all of the incredible ASP summer staff who make this mission work possible!
