

LOGO STORY

A LANDSCAPE OF SHARED MINISTRY

The arch recalls a church window, echoing the Presbytery's grounding in Christian faith and Presbyterian tradition.

The cross stands at the center of the window, planted in the hills and rising above the water. Everything else is arranged around it.

The rising sun represents hope, renewal, clarity, and the possibility of a new season.

The hills reflect the landscape of the Highlands and the many communities rooted across the region.

The river represents baptism, movement, relationship, and the shared work that connects congregations across distance.

The white divisions recall stained glass while allowing distinct forms to become one complete image.

Many communities. One connected landscape.
